The Hampton-Ha; Cor The Naw York Her Co Judge S. J. Mackey, Lath Carolina, who came here yesterday win a special message from Wade Hampton to Governor Hayes, remained at the house of the latter gentleman ustil after one o'cook list night. Mr Macket is a native of South Carolog, having gone into the Maxican war when feuturen years old and wen three rapidals for brivery. He was also other in the Confedera e army and was deperately ounded several times. He was also prately ounded as a confederate of the confederate he baser elements of his par y." Mr. M key Aben became General Haupton's warm and and made a canvass of the State with aim, speaking in the interest of Hampt and Hayes. He said this vas done with timptou's consent, so as to allow Hampte to devote himself entirely to the discussion State

Mackey cannot be charged with be a nar row partisan, for as a juge in renders a decision on Secretary Tail's order reave to intin dation of voters, Mackey of g d the Grand of atting that "it consutes inemployees as to how they sha fote, or for employees to threaten to ratuse o work for persons who do not vote certain as Mackey assures Hay wint in her General Hampton nor Governe atce. North Caro lina, are willing to sus and Narr red emocrats in their threats of in their threats of war to prev. Hayes' inauguration. Mackey gave speci prominence to the statement that neither () roor Hampton nor the other leading men o is State s ught to make terms with Hayes nope of gaining offices or controlling patro e. Their course was actuated by the feeling that Hayes had been fairly elected and a dire to prevent the nation from being plunged to civil war. They believed Congress must tile this question heir to. and the South would accessee in their decis ion. It Northern deme its should see fit to bring about a war to prent the inauguration of the legally elected Psideat they, no doubt. would expect help from North or South Carolina, but, on the control they might expect, if it was necessary, to if men of those States arrayed on the side of a national government. Judge Mackey referred a recent conference held at Governor Hamon's house, at which Hampton had said he ad "voted for Tilden, but that he did not this he had been elected; if he had been he did think he could do as much for the South Hayes could, for this simple reason, that den's war record was such that people of th Nath were suspicious of him; and, although height desire to treat the South fairly, his very psition would make him hesitating and mid. None doubted Hayes' toyalty, and and ver concessions he might make to the back during his term would not be misconstied."

When asked what lumpton proposed to do next Mackey replies "Hampton is simply waiting, firm in the bel that all will yet be well for bim.'

In reply to a query: to whether he feared bloodshed in his Stateas a consequence of her having two Governs, Mackey says: 'No, not now; we did fear some time age, when it was reported that namberlan proposed to send his negro militiaut to enforce the collection of the seventeen ill tax. It that had been done the militia wouldertainly have been destroyed; but it is not said that Chamberlain will not do this." Ladded "one federal soldier is all that is paled to guard our State, because he represer this great government and is as good as an rmy. We could, if we wanted to use themcall into immediate service 25,000 splendiso diers, but we do not need them. We tat the government to do what is fair."

Mackey further id that just before leaving home Governor Impton had said to him, "Tell the Norther people that my great desire is to restore m State to its proper civilization; to open it u to immigration from the North and to welcase Northern brain, muscle and capital to our state and our homes on the plan of a full socil and business equality with our own people.'

In response to a quetion as to what news his people got a to the feeling of North ern democrts on the sination. Mackey said they "were contoually receiving assurances that the demorats o Ohio and Indiana were ready to nake var to loreibly inau NEW SPLIT PEAS for sale by gurate. Tiden, and that the democrats of New 13 G. W.M. RAMSAY. gurate Tilden, and that the democrats of South Carelina were uged to participate in the movement, but thes demands were discountenanced by Gov. Hampton and other leading men. He said is people "really cared little who was President so that they were allowed to rule their own tate."

He reserred to Hampto's great popularity among colored men, and aid a high tribute to their faithfulness, sayingthere was an "undivisible" co-partnership xisting between the freedmen and the Southrn people.

Mackey said he was all pleased with his talk with Governor Hays. He was satisfied that Hayes's treatment (the South would be fair and honest to all clases, and that he would seek to control the Southern States by kindness and justice, rather tan by force. General William Presso, of Kentucky, an old personal friend of Geral Hampton's was in Uncinnati to day, and esolved to get all the faces by addressing Hamjon on the subject. The following telegram etween the two will explain how far he succed:— Cincinnati, Dec. 29, 1876. Gov Wade Hampton, Combia. S. C .:-A telegram from Columbs, Ohio, announces that Judge Mackey, in yor behalf, has made propositions to Governor Fayes to support him for President against Governor Tilden, recogbixing Hayes as legally eleted, and offering to support him against the Anthern democracy. This I do not believe, but a is injuring the detheracy here. Your wise ad novie course has strengthened my long frienship for you. In my ju igment there should e a prompt denial, and this I submit to your ecision, WILIAM PRESTON. To this the following reply was made

COLUMBIA, S. C. Dec. 29, 1876. To Gen William Preston, Cacinnati, Ohio :-No one is an norized to ma e declarations for me or for our party here. We abide the decisions of legitimate authorit and hope for a W.DE HANPTON, Peaceful solution.
